History

Structured Health Resources, Inc. (SHR) was founded in 1996 by Sara Taylor Eggleston to assist employers in their efforts to offer health promotion, ergonomic programs, and disability management strategies. Additional disability management consultants have joined the SHR team to expand the range of services available. Since the company was founded, we have implemented ergonomic programs that have produced measurable results with more than fifty employers in the Midwest.

Our Goal: To avoid or minimize the impact of disability.

We are a collaborative team that recognizes the uniqueness of both individual employees and employer needs, and the impact of the environment on disability.

Employer Testimonials:

"Structured Health Resources has been one of the most important aspects of our safety improvement plans by offering timely, cost effective and efficient input from ergonomic improvements to physical demands evaluations. I would refer this organization to anyone concerned with improving their facility."

– Paula Batey, Environmental, Health and Safety Administrator
DesignWare/American Greetings

"Structured Health Resources has been performing workstation assessments for our business since 2001. Proactively identifying issues and implementing corrective measures has been invaluable in helping us to achieve strong safety and health measures in the workplace."

– Paul D. Moss, Vice President Global
EHS & Travel Chief Security Officer
Siemens Healthcare Diagnostics

"Robert Bosch, LLC has partnered with Structured Health Resources since 1996 and has performed personalized ergonomic assessments for our associates. By taking a proactive approach to an associate's well being, symptomatic issues have been corrected and potential disability claims alleviated 96% of the time. Our associates are more productive and pleased with this personal interest in their wellbeing."
